Recent webinars

Creating value through embedding sustainability

Embedding sustainability across an organisation requires commitment and innovation. The Co-operators (Canada) developed their first sustainability strategy just over a decade ago and in 2015, formally began to integrate and embed sustainability in their corporate strategy. Their journey to embed sustainability organisation-wide continues today and in this webinar explores the business impact of those efforts, creating economic, social and environmental value for the organisation.

The future of insurance: Preparing today for the risks and opportunities of tomorrow

In this webinar, three strategic leaders from cooperative/mutual insurers will provide an insight to their current strategic positioning and approach to anticipating emerging trends, external developments and new expectations that will impact their business decisions in the future.

Leveraging the start-up ecosystem to spark innovation

As InsurTech start-up firms rapidly enter the insurance sector, their potential to disrupt the insurance ecosystem could also revolutionise value creation within the industry. In order to embrace this change, many insurers are looking to invest in or partner with start-ups to leverage the new opportunities offered. In this ICMIF webinar, two mutual insurers share their journey of collaboration within the start-up ecosystem.

Millennials driving change

Embedding innovation into business strategy and organisational culture is critical for insurers to survive and thrive in today's fast-changing world. In this webinar, three young leaders from ICMIF members shared how millennial-focused initiatives at their respective organisations are driving innovation and transformational change across the whole business.

Innovation @ Mobiliar

In this webinar, ICMIF member Swiss Mobiliar present the key milestones, adaptations and learnings from its current innovation strategy, which involves a dual transformation of digitizing the core business (the "mothership") whilst exploring new innovation initiatives ("speedboats").

Are insurers ready for the new mobility ecosystem?

As consumers move from personally owned and operated automobiles, we will see the evolution to a mobility system comprised of driverless vehicles and shared mobility platforms. As this transformation unfolds, insurers will need to change their approach to auto insurance products and services. In this webinar, explores the future state of mobility and examines opportunities for mutual and cooperative insurers to create value for their customers.

A mutual's role in the future of rural insurance

This webinar shares how mutuality strategically advantages FMG in the New Zealand rural insurance markets, based on research used in FMG's strategic planning by evaluating the impact of past, present and future macro environmental forces. This thought-provoking research will share their perspectives on what the future holds for insurance and expected impacts for farmers, growers and rural communities.

Enhancing the effectiveness of your cross-cultural collaboration

This webinar looks at the way people prefer to schedule, communicate, give feedback and make decisions, how these preferences arise from and define different cultures and the simple approaches, blending Erin Meyer's Culture Map with the models of behaviour used at ICMIF's learning courses, that enhance the effectiveness of our cross-cultural collaboration.

Future webinars

The digital mutual

5 December 2019, 3pm GMT

In this series of bi-monthly webinars, various ICMIF members from around the world will showcase their digital strategy and journey in the pursuit of digital transformation. Learn how leading mutual/cooperative insurers are harnessing the power of technologies to digitise their business and integrate digitalisation and innovation into their overall strategy, whilst maintaining their unique value proposition and member driven focus. Hear examples of new technological capabilities, digital innovations and strategic partnerships in the digital ecosystem as they look to transform their business models to adapt for the increasingly digitalised world. The next episode will feature Adam Taylor, Director, Institutional Market External Facing Platform, Securian Financial (USA).
